

Part 1 of a survey:
STORYVILLE SV 3000, 6000, 7000 & 9000 VIDEO SERIES
AND DVD RE-ISSUES

Compiled by Allan Stephensen. Updated in March, 2010.

(First 23 titles were produced by Storyville Films AB in 1988. The latest in the 6000 series were produced by Storyville Records.)

Soundies were three minute black and white films of all sorts: Swing, big bands, jazz, blues, gospel, vaudeville and much more. One reel of eight Soundies was released each week. They were shown on a jukebox-like machine called a Panoram, the most widely distributed brand. It was a coin-operated 16 mm projector machine, mounted on top of a stylish cabinet and located in bars, nightclubs and other public places throughout the U.S.A. and Canada. One reel of eight Soundies was released each week. Over 1.800 of these films were made between January, 1941 and mid-1948. Initially, Soundies were extremely popular. But due to a shortage of production materials during the war, the Panorams themselves were in short supply and this fact ultimately spelled the demise of the Soundies. Nevertheless, of special interest for jazz collectors world wide, they captured on film many superb jazz musicians at the peak of their powers making an irreplaceable contribution to the history of American music during this period.

The Soundies themselves have had a rocky history. The Soundies Distribution Corp. Of America folded. Official Films Inc. acquired the rights in the early days of Television. Storyville Film AB, by license from Official Films, has long been the European distributor of the Soundies. The Soundies appearing on the videos listed below, are so marked.

Note: In 1991, Charly Records (UK) released a series of Soundies on video - deleted long ago.

The Snader Telescriptions were the very first music videos. Producer, Lou Snader and director/editor, Duke Goldstone got the idea to make records for television. After some initial resistance, Snader secured exclusive television contracts with some of the most important musicians of the day. From 1950 until about 1953/54, over 700 Snaders were made, 10-12 in a day. All of the top jazz, pop and country stars performed in these 3 and 4 minute films. Almost all of them were filmed by multy-cameras and live microphones using Telefunken products, being the very best on the market. They were presented in much the same way that music videos are shown today. An on-camera disc jockey introduced the numbers and made some pertinent comments and then the "records for television" were shown. The Snaders were very popular with audiences. However, due to some creative financing procedures, the whole thing collapsed. Snaders golden opportunity with some of the most successful musical stars of the time disappeared before his eyes. Yet Snader managed to produce some very memorable music for us to enjoy many years later. Storyville has licensed the Snaders from Pathé Pictures, Inc. Those appearing on the videos listed below are so marked.

The Goodyear Tyre & Rubber Co commissioned in the early 1960's five short jazz films, featuring as many band leaders of the day that was not purely philanthropic, but which also acted as part of a promotional campaign. The five programmes in the series were all filmed in color and have stereo soundtracks - a rarity for footage shot in that era. The team responsible were: Mike Bryan, Executive Producer. Bernard Rubin, Director. Theodore Pahle, A.S.C. Editor: Cal Schultz.

Note: In August, 2004 on www.allaboutjazz.com it was announced that a new Storyville DVD could be pre-ordered for delivery on February 15th (2005). No results here either as per this date. Probably never issued.

Quoting the above link:

“Featuring MacArthur Park/Chameleon/La Fiesta/I Can’t Get Started/Gospel John/Got The Spirit. Filmed at Rochester, New York, 1975. Maynard Ferguson with his Orchestra performs his most memorable songs and he amazes the fans with his stratospheric trumpet playing. This newly remastered performance also includes never before seen photos from Maynard’s famous Carnegie Hall Concert, sound clips, an exclusive slideshow, and several other special features.”

Region codes: A DVD will have one of seven region codes encoded on it: #1 U.S.A. and Canada, #2 Japan, Europe, South and the Middle East, #3 East Asia and Southeast Asia, #4 Australia, New Zealand, some Pacific Islands, Central and South America, # 5 Indian Subcontinent, Former Soviet Union and Africa, # 6 China and #0 no region.

A DVD with a region code 2 on it, for instant, will only play on a #2 DVD player (Europe a.o.) The same goes for the other region codes, except #0 which is playable all over. Nowadays, however, it is possible to buy a DVD player with a build in #0 code.

For content of all DVDs, please see part 2.
